BACKGROUND INFORMATION

World War II

Responding to a worldwide economic crisis, increasingly militaristic Japan and Germany sought to expand their spheres of influence through several invasions. The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor brought the United States into the war in 1941. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt declared that every United States citizen should contribute to the war effort at home or abroad. Kentucky contributed over 300,000 individuals to military service; almost 8,000 of them died and countless others became prisoners of war. The war ended for Germany in May 1945 and for Japan three months later, after atom bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

John H. Rodman

Major John H. Rodman, of Owensboro, Ky., led the 57th Regiment, Philippine Scouts in 1939. When war erupted two years later, he commanded the 92nd Regiment of the 91st Infantry Division, Philippine Army. Captured on April 9, 1942 on Luzon, Rodman remained a prisoner of the Japanese until September 1945. Unlike many prisoners, he communicated with his family through radio broadcast and letters.

LETTERS FROM A POW

ACTIVITY*

Discuss the acronym POW. Have your students write down what they think it means. Explain what a prisoner of war is and how they were treated during World War II.

Next have them learn about John Rodman. By the time Rodman's mother received the letter he wrote in February 1942, he had already been captured by the Japanese. There are four other communications in the KHS collections from John between 1942-1945; (1) the first is a radio broadcast of a personal message written by John in 1943, (2) the second is a postcard to his wife in 1943, (3) the third is a letter to his sister in 1944 and (4) the fourth is another letter to his sister in 1945 after his release from the prison camp.

- 1. Study the letters for five to ten minutes. Note your overall impressions.
- 2. Using the chart below, list the people, places and events you read.

Letter from John Rodman to his mother, 1942.

Donated by Anne Sullivan, 1992.20

- 3. How do Rodman's letter to his wife and the first letter to his sister describe his life as a POW?
- 4. Why do you suppose Rodman brings up insurance premiums in three of his five correspondences?
- Compare and contrast the letter written to his mother in 1942 with the letter written to his sister in 1945.
- 6. Describe the radio broadcast. What are some key words you were able to identify? How does the broadcast differ from the letters Rodman wrote?
